 SAN FRANCISCO, August 17.—United States Supervising Inspector Bermingham today reduced the sentence of revocation of the license, imposed by the United States local inspectors at Portland, upon George Curtis of the light-house tender Heather, to suspension of four months after July 25, and struck out of his license the endorsement giving him power to serve as a master of unlimited tonnage. Curtis allowed the Heather to run into the jetty at the mouth of the Columbia River.

"The entire story is a lie, and started simply by a few meddling neighbors." With these words, Mrs. Ida Cooper, otherwise known as Ida Jarvis, heatedly denied the charges that she had mistreated her mother, and caused her to be falsely imprisoned in the Insane Asylum at Salem, and further that she had abused her little boy.

The steamer Lurline, according to Pilot Scott, opened up her get-away tank yesterday morning, leaving out of Portland, and kept alongside the flying little Telegraph for a distance of sixteen miles. For a short distance the boats were so close in the channel that two of their respective employees were shaking hands across the "muddy chasm." It is not often the Lurline misbehaves herself in this fashion but she let out a few kinks yesterday, just for the sake of the olden days when she was a crack liner. She is still a comfortable and a popular steamer. She went up last evening with the following people on her cabin lists: Mr. and Mrs. M. Nolan; W. Glennon, R. Jones, George Sheppard, O. G. Parker, Mrs. R. W. Getz and D. C. Aiken.

Mrs. Cooper denied that she had been warned to leave Portland by the neighbors. She asserted that she had only been in the metropolis a few times, and then but for a few days. Her statements are confirmed in this respect by Chief of Police Gammel, who stated last night that Mrs. Cooper had resided in Astoria for the last two years. Her husband is also living here, working as barkeeper in one of the saloons in the tenderloin. The two are however said to be separated.

Loading of the British ship Vermont at the Tongue Point Lumber Company's docks, is not proceeding as fast as it should because of the scarcity of labor to do the work. Up to yesterday but 300,000 feet had been loaded, and prospects are that the work will not be finished for ten days later than was estimated on. This fact will entail a hardship on the lumber company who are compelled to pay demurrage at the rate of $400 a day for every day over the time agreed upon when the loading should be finished. About ten more men are needed.

"I never abused my little boy, and neither does Mrs. Botsford," continued Mrs. Cooper. "This Mrs. Stewart seems to take a lot of interest in my affairs. Who she is, or why she is telling all these lies, I cannot say."

Among the passengers out of Astoria yesterday morning on the Roanoke, were J. H. Johansen, of Seaside, to San Francisco; Matt Frederickson to Eureka; and Mrs. Cary to the Bay City. Sixteen fishermen, with two boats and nets, were also on board, from this port.

A story related in connection with the marriage of Mrs. Cooper's mother, is to the effect that when she met Jarvis, he led her to believe him a rich capitalist of Los Angeles, and she likewise deceived Jarvis as to her financial status. Each believed the other to have means. The awakening to the facts in the case came in Los Angeles after the couple had returned from their wedding trip to Portland.

It is said the Columbia Mills at Knappton are so short of men that it has become necessary to shut down the plant and use the mill hands in loading the schooner Churchill for her return to the orient.

The two were stopping at one of the fashionable resorts in the southern city at the time. The thought that he had married a woman of no means, according to the papers in Los Angeles, drove Jarvis insane. The end came to his part in the affair the morning following the revelation, when the bride of a few weeks, awoke to find the body of her husband lying on the pavement seven floors below.

The shock, attendant upon the circumstances, is given as cause for the derangement of the woman's mind. The tragedy occurred last winter.

LUMBER SLIDE.

One Man Killed and One Injured in Falling Lumber Pile.

NEW YORK, August 17.—One man was killed, another injured and five had a narrow escape in a lumber slide in the hold of the schooner David Faust in the North River yesterday. Alainz, descending through the hatchway, heard a premonitory rumble and saw the six men in the hold were in danger. Planks slipped from the pile eight feet high and thumping on the floor among the bewildered laborers. Alainz grabbed a heavy standing and held it against the tottering stack with all his might, shouting to the men to save themselves. Five of the men were badly bruised, had scrambled out of the tangle of boards, while a piece struck Alainz and broke his right wrist. He jumped clear of the pile, which came down with a crash. John Bowers, 32 years old, was buried under the lumber and instantly killed.

DIES OF FRIGHT.

NEW YORK, August 17.—Fear of a large bull terrier led to the death of Hugh Leonard, a middle aged man, on the east side last night. The dog had dangerously bitten another man, Martin Donovan. The animal, Donovan told the physicians at the hospital, where he was taken, was set on him and Leonard by an intoxicated man in a Chinatown saloon. Leonard ran out of the place in fear and presently died in a drug store where he had sought refuge. Donovan's condition is serious. The police later arrested August Marcella, a bartender.

DECK AND DOCK NEWS.

The Telegraph came down in season yesterday, with 23 passengers for Astoria, and left up again in a few minutes, with a fair list for the metropolis.

The steamer J. B. Stetson cleared from the Tongue Point Mills here, yesterday afternoon, with 893,000 feet of lumber for the Bay City.

The brigantine Lurline cleared at the custom house yesterday, from the Clatsop mills, with 370,000 feet of lumber, also headed for San Francisco.

The steamer Thomas L. Wand arrived down from Portland yesterday evening lumber laden for San Francisco, and after a brief stay at the Callender pier, left for the lower harbor, and the open sea as soon as she can make it.

The British ship Comeric, lumber laden for Port Pirie, Australia, is unable to leave at present, owing to being stuck hard and fast in the mud at Portland. All efforts thus far to pull her off have proved fruitless, and most of the load will have to be removed to lighters, it is said, before there is any hope of budging her.

The bar schooner San Jose left down for the bar at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, with Captain McVicker in command, and Captain George Wood doing pilot duty. She will remain on bar service until the Joseph Pulitzer shall have had remedied certain defective timbers which came to light during her recent stay in the drydock at St. Johns. This work will not take very long it is thought at the pilot office.
